

Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election is a clear example of the dangers of media consolidation.

Our nation's airwaves are not intended to be used to spread the propaganda of the people who own the company. Sinclair refused to air a program previously that they felt might hurt Bush. Now they propose to air a program commercial free to benefit him. This is a horrible misuse of the public airwaves, and should not be allowed.

Sinclair Broadcasting Group should be denied any license to use the public airwaves, because they do not use, they misuse.

Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest. But when large companies control the airwaves, we get more of what's good for the bottom line and less of what we need for our democracy. Instead of something produced at "News Central" far away, it's more important that we see real people from our own communities and more substantive news about issues that matter.

Sinclair's actions show why we need to strengthen media ownership rules, not weaken them. They show why the license renewal process needs to involve more than a returned postcard. Thank you.
